

The article describes the possibility of accumulation of empirical data storage and database management «Apomicts» as an example to study the ability of apomictic reproduction in representatives of the family Asteraceae.